The leading provider of supportive cancer care in South Australia, since 1985

Cancer Care Centre Inc is a community based, not-for-profit organisation offering a wide range of complementary care to support cancer patients and their families. Complementary care refers to a variety of holistic health services which enhance wellbeing on physical, emotional, mental and spiritual levels. Areas specific to cancer care include interpersonal support such as counselling and support groups; stress management approaches such as meditation and massage and nutritional approaches such as diet and nutrients. Research has demonstrated that complementary care improves cancer patients' wellbeing and may assist them to better tolerate their medical treatment for optimal outcomes. Cancer Care Centre Inc staff consist of a variety of dedicated health care professionals and trained volunteers – many of whom have been affected by cancer in their own lives. We support individuals and families to empower themselves as they travel the cancer journey. We provide an environment which complements medical treatment as clients work towards wellbeing.

MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

The cancer care centre is relocating

The Cancer Care Centre Board have an important announcement to share in that the Cancer Care Centre Inc is about to move from our beautiful premises at Edmund Avenue. The City of Unley has given us notice to vacate our premises by the end of October 2020 due to council undertaking a major redevelopment of the cottages on Edmund Avenue.

With a positive view in mind the Board, see this relocation as providing an opportunity for the Cancer Care Centre to retain its current services, but at the same time providing opportunities to expand our services, collaborate with new businesses/organisations and engage new members.

If you are you aware of any spaces that would suit our needs to continue to provide the services that we currently provide ie: office administration; massage; counselling; meeting room and kitchen. If you have connections within the commercial leasing space or vacant premises for rent, can you please let us know.

At this time any financial contribution or donation that will help offset the cost of moving, refurbishing, possible increase in our rent and promoting our new home would be appreciated. If you cannot help us out financially there may other ways that you could assist us ie: packing up; moving; labour for refurbishing – talk to us about these and other support that you or your business can provide.

We know there has been unavoidable and significant disruption to our services in the last few months due to COVID-19 restrictions and we are now working our way back to a new normal.

Please be reassured that the Cancer Care Centre will prioritise a seamless transition to minimise disruption to our services which will continue as advertised right up to our moving date.

We are keener than ever to continue to build and grow our broad range of support services, therapies, activities and begin the next chapter of Cancer Care Centre.

Please do not hesitate to contact Calandra Scott Centre Manager in our office (08) 8272 2411 if you need further information. I look forward to you joining staff, volunteers, therapists and the board of Cancer Care Centre in this new chapter.

Kind regards,
Susan Ross
Chair, Cancer Care Centre Board

MESSAGE FROM THE MANAGER

I was happy to see life back in the Centre after re opening the doors on the 9th June. It was great to see the phones ringing, people coming and going and everyone reconnecting once again.

Although we are still not back to full steam, it is great to see our therapies back on and continuing to support those in need. You will find in the centre of this magazine an update to what we are able to offer at present, please see page 10 & 11.

On a personal note I had to say goodbye to my father Brian Cain, who lost his long hard fought two year battle with Cancer this May. You may remember seeing him at our Jazz and Blues fundraising afternoon we held a couple years ago with his band The Fluerieu Bluesbreakers. This would be one of the last times he played as it was the start of his Cancer treatment which consisted of three lifesaving operations, four different types of chemo and radiation therapy. I want to say thankyou to the Board, Volunteer and Members who have been an outstanding support to me over the last month or so with their care and understanding.

Lee, a Board Member and Counsellor here at the Centre, has written an article relevant to helping members during this time, you will find this on page 8. Helene another one of our counsellors has written a piece on Advanced Care Planning, you can find that article on page 16 and on page 17 Truffy has written an inspiring book review.

We have had some large donations come into the Centre over the last few months and would like to say a big thank you to SA Power Networks Employee Foundation who donated $3,000, and Milton Lodge Inc. Milton Lodge members Graham Earnshaw, Andrew Solomon and Ray Nicholson met with Board Members Sue Ross, Arthur Galantomos and Therese Covington, where our Chair Sue was presented with a donation of $3,000. Thank you to Ray Nicholson, previous Chairman of the Centre, for continuing to support us (pictured right).

As a volunteer orientated charity, our volunteers are the foundation of this Centre and I would like to welcome our newest volunteers Eva Tepper, Don Tepper, Roselaine Souza De Almeida, Geraldine Sladden and Silvana Vagnoni to our team. Thank you all for your time, your wonderful skills and your support!

In February this year, the Centre hosted a very successful Meet the Scientist event. Professor Simon Barry's presentation introduced us to the science behind Immunotherapy and the current status of CAR-T Immunotherapy. This developing therapy is fast becoming the long hoped for treatment for cancer with minimal side effects and the audience went away with a message of hope. Please see featured in this edition, a review of the presentation along with a good news announcement! See page 7.

We look forward to rescheduling our workshops and courses in due time. We thank you all for your patience and understanding in this difficult time. As previously mentioned, more details of planned upcoming services can be seen on page 10 & 11. For our latest information regarding the Coronavirus please refer to page 6.

Warmest Regards,
Calandra Scott
Manager

Important information

Changes to CCC operations due to COVID-19

Cancer Care Centre is closely monitoring the COVID-19 and will be regularly updating all our members and volunteers via various communication channels as the situation and response required changes.

The Cancer Care Centre has been following the State and Federal Government Health Departments regulations in regard to COVID-19 restrictions. Our first priority, as always, is to ensure the safety and wellbeing of all staff, members, volunteers and the wider national community. Based on early recommendations during March the Centre acted quickly to the COVID-19 threat and initially put in place protective guidelines relating to the operations of the Centre and visitor admission to the Centre. However, shortly after and until the present time of writing, the Centre has been closed to visitors with all courses, classes and therapies that cannot be delivered online having been cancelled or postponed until further notice.

For current operations please check ongoing updates from the CCC via e-news emails or Facebook posts, or call the Centre on 8272 2411.

In the meantime additional cleaning protocols will continue within the Centre and hand sanitisers (gel type) is available in all, administration areas, toilet facilities, staff amenities, rooms and reception/waiting areas.

Hygiene Education

Within the Centre, instructions are displayed to demonstrate effective handwashing techniques, minimising personal contact with others, avoiding touching your own mouth, nose and eyes when possible, and the necessity to 'wash, wipe and cover'.

In the foreseeable event of the centre re opening, we ask that all members and volunteers visiting the centre to use these hygiene facilities.

This is an unprecedented occurrence for everyone in the industry, and there are many variables and decisions subject to change as official advice changes. But we will not compromise the health and safety of those in the CCC community.

Further information

What should you do if you or a family member becomes ill?

We ask that members and volunteers remain aware and vigilant of the symptoms of COVID-19, which include fever, cough, sore throat and shortness of breath, and to consult with your GP if you or a family member are displaying any symptoms or are at risk of COVID-19 infection.

If you are feeling unwell and/or displaying possible symptoms of COVID-19, please stay at home until you have been cleared by your GP or health officials.

We request that members and volunteers keep Cancer Care Centre informed in regard to any ongoing health developments which may be of concern.

What should members or volunteers do if they have overseas travel plans?

We request that all members and volunteers remain mindful of the ramifications associated with overseas travel at this time, the ever-changing nature of the official Australian Government travel advice (Smart Traveller website), travel restrictions and self-isolation periods that are currently in place. At the time of writing, the current restrictions may mean you being either unable to re-enter the country or being required to enter into a 2 week period of imposed self-isolation upon return.

Overseas Travel Register

Upon re opening of the Centre, as a precaution, and to enable us to protect our community of the spread of COVID-19 pandemic, we may establish an overseas travel register. This may require any member and volunteer either planning overseas travel or having returned from overseas travel within the past 14 days, to please notify the Cancer Care Centre via email admin@cancercarecentre.org.au in order to keep the Centre informed.

It is recommended you look to the official COVID-19 Australian Government website and helpline for any advice you require. <https://www.health.gov.au/contacts/national-coronavirus-helpline>

Meet The Scientist evening plus an exciting announcement

CCC member, Trudi, attended the evening and provided the following report:

Last night I attended the Meet the Scientist presentation at our Cancer Care Centre in Unley. Prof Simon Barry gave us an overview of how our immune system works, then spoke about his lab work on CAR-T therapy. The idea is that some of a cancer patient's T cells are removed, reprogrammed with CAR-T and using a virus, are reintroduced back into the body in large numbers to attack the cancer cells, acting like a Trojan Horse. We now know that CAR-T therapy can work in humans with blood cancer and so the race is on to get it to work for solid tumours. Labs around the world are working on this and exciting developments are happening here in Adelaide.

We were all amazed by Prof Barry's lab videos – made with expensive equipment. We saw in vitro, first of all, lymphocytes searching, in vain, for pathogens and second, the lymphocytes with their customised CAR-T cells finding and destroying the cancer cells. He then showed similar scenes in a living creature, a sleeping mouse. Absolutely fascinating to watch! When T-cells can recognise the bad guys, they are tenacious! Things ended well in the petri dish, and thankfully, also for the mouse with the CAR-T cells.

Prof Barry presented key scientific concepts in a way that was easy for his non-scientific audience to understand on some of the processes, results and challenges in the lab. We got a sense of the enormity of this endeavour and regardless of their successes so far, the long and costly road to get approval and funding for a clinical trial.

Meet the Scientist last night brought me great hope and inspiration for what could be achieved in defeating any number of cancers using this customised method to harness one's natural immune system and potentially without side effects. Research funding is a big deal. Prof Barry spends a big portion of his time applying for grants.

So what can we do to help this dream one day become a reality? We could individually lobby, or we could get together to apply pressure as a group for more government funding, both state and national. We can help raise funds ourselves and we can raise awareness of this very important endeavour happening here in Adelaide.

Minister for Innovation and Skills, David Pisoni, must have heard Trudi's call for greater financial funding because over Easter he made the following announcement:

Carina Biotech wins $750,000 State Government award!

Carina Biotech was one of six Adelaide start-ups to share in more than $2.75 million through the State Government's Research Commercialisation and Startup Fund (RCSF).

Minister for Innovation and Skills, David Pisoni, announced the funding awards over the Easter long weekend. "While we all come to grips with the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, it is important that we continue to back startups to ensure they continue to innovate, solve problems and grow," Minister Pisoni said.

Carina will use the money to further develop our CAR-T manufacturing techniques.

Carina Biotech Managing Director Justin, in their recent April e-newsletter writes:

"The adaptability and resilience [in response to COVID-19 considerations] that our research teams have demonstrated over these few very difficult weeks has been nothing short of amazing. Our researchers should be extremely proud of their efforts. Seeing our researchers' dedication to their work under the current conditions makes me feel privileged to be a leader of Carina Biotech."

A huge thank you to our great team – Professor Simon Barry and his colleagues at the Women's & Children's Hospital, Professor Shaun McColl and his colleagues at the University of Adelaide, Professor Martin Oehler and Dr Carmela Ricciardelli and their group at the RAH/ University of Adelaide, and Professor Allison Cowin, Professor Claudine Bonder and Associate Professor Anton Blencowe and their teams at UniSA."

Great news Carina Biotech and all associated scientists!

Keep up the good work. There are many people watching closely for the next immunotherapy breakthrough!

The light in the COVID-19 tunnel

Living during Coronavirus ...finding ways to approach each day and handle the complexities.

"In a pandemic, self-isolation is called quarantine. In Buddhism, it is called retreat. From the cave of our home, like the meditators of ancient times, we can consciously kindle the lamp of compassion and connection." ~ Lama Willa Miller

Acknowledging the difficulties COVID-19 has struck us all hard and fast, impacting our lives as we know them both on an external macro-global level as well as in our internal, most private worlds. Especially following the widespread Australian bushfires, it has shocked us and thrust us into a 'survival' mode, some more than others, and often this will depend on your health status, employment, financial circumstances and personal network systems.

It's difficult to respond to these pressures, to adjust the way we live and work, processing the loss of our 2020 expectations without feeling anxious, worried and even distressed at times. It can sit there in the back of our minds and take us by surprise.

Indeed all these uncertainties and fears have potential to retrigger memories of past events, either consciously or subconsciously, when you experienced a serious situation of uncertainty, crisis, loss or lack of control.

The first step toward regaining your sense of calm and control may involve your genuine, non-judgemental appreciation of your (or others) difficulties and noticing the emotions that arise. By acknowledging how we are feeling, we are exercising compassion not just toward others but towards ourselves. Self-compassion is an effective technique to self soothe.

Mindfulness and meditation also invites you to observe your feelings rather than suppress/ push them away or, on the other hand, get caught with the same repetitive thoughts that become amplified as they go around in circles.

A guided session as recommended in the 'Tips for Coping' (reproduced in this edition from our recent Cancer Care Centre e-news), will help you practise how to gently shift your attention from difficult emotions and enable you to engage in an activity or focus that grounds you in the present moment, giving you a sense of release.

Having found some calm, you may then see more clearly an area of your life where you still have control; it may be small but still effective in providing you some pleasure, relaxation and satisfaction. It may be rearranging your personal space at home, choosing new reading material, entertainment or potting some herbs.

You may see an opportunity for some new learning... as simple as a new recipe or exploring a new technology or website.

With our 'normal' being disrupted, perhaps it has not only activated the "pause" button, but provided an opportunity to find an area of your life where you want to press your "re-set" button.

A helpful perspective

A recent interview with social researcher and author Hugh Mackay, provides a very comforting and enlightening perspective of this pandemic experience. (You can hear this interview by going to the ABC website or App and searching 'Conversations with Richard Fidler and Sarah Kanowski') <https://www.abc.net.au/radio/programs/conversations/hugh-mackay-2020/12116632>

He reminds us that in Australia during the last 100 years there have been comparable events to the current pandemic circumstances, especially the Spanish flu pandemic in 1919. Similar restrictions were imposed and assisted survival rates as they did through polio and other outbreaks. Schools closed and the daily home-schooling lessons for each year level were published in the local Advertiser newspaper!

Hugh gives us the gift of perspective that these events came and went and that this pandemic too is temporary and will pass (although the economic impacts especially will linger). In his research, he found Australians regarded the Great Depression of the 1930s as "life changing" and "the making of me", developing their personal and community values. They discovered "what really mattered to them" and the true sense of "we are all in this together". Hugh highlighted that the pandemic is a perfect example of how interconnected we all are, globally and locally.

But there are many of us who feel more isolated due to the social isolation restrictions, particularly those living alone and with vulnerable health status who must be more vigilant to stay safe. If there was ever a time to reach out for connection or to extend friendship and compassion to your neighbours, strangers, friends and family, it is now. The benefits for everyone, both the giver and the receiver, are palpable.

Have you heard of the "Kindness Pandemic"? This is a great example of Australian communities thriving, not just surviving. I encourage you to visit <https://www.thekindnesspandemic.org/>

It was established on April 14th 2020 by Dr Catherine Barrett, its membership grew to 500,000 in 2 weeks!

A 'natural' connection

While we can find stability and reassurance from connecting with others, we can also look to nature to be a supportive, reliable, constant, rhythmic presence in our lives. It is easy to become absorbed by the beautiful colours of autumn leaves around us, you might take a photo each day of a tree, leaf, outdoor scene, and track the differences as the season changes.

Another simple way of connecting with nature is to tune our attention to the natural cycles of the day and night the sun rising to support life and setting with a beautiful sunset display. When was the last time you mindfully gazed at the stunning night sky full of stars and the moon? Notice it's a different display every day and night, and feel the connection within your body.

I recommend reading Meredith Russell's article in this edition about the five elements of space, air, fire, water and earth, and the Ayurvedic view of embracing them to maintain balance in our bodies and lives.

The suggestions you see in this edition may sound too insignificant or esoteric to make a difference to your mental and emotional wellbeing, however, subtle as they may be, there is potential to help develop an attitude that Viktor Emil Frankl emphasised. He was an Austrian Neurologist and psychiatrist as well as a Holocaust survivor. He said:

"When we are no longer able to change a situation, we are challenged to change ourselves."

Everything can be taken from a man but one thing: the last of the human freedoms—to choose one's attitude in any given set of circumstances, to choose one's own way.

Between stimulus and response there is a space. In that space is our power to choose our response. In our response lies our growth and our freedom."

Lee Hutton
Cancer Care Centre Counsellor

Tips for coping

In these unusual and unique times caused by COVID-19 we can experience difficult feelings including rising anxiety, sadness, fear, frustration and anger. These feelings are perfectly normal and natural but sometimes they can exhaust and overwhelm us, leaving us not knowing how to manage them. This may be especially so for people undergoing cancer or other medical treatment and/or in the process of recovery.

Our counsellors have worked together to compile a list of simple strategies that you can access to help feel more resilient and better able to cope.

Just look through the list and choose the ones that speak to you:

- Take a break from the news and only check quality information sites that you know are up to date with informed information. Good sites are www.health.gov.au or ABC News. You can reassure yourself against misinformation and fake news by checking the RMIT fact check website <https://www.rmit.edu.au/news/all-news/2020/march/corona-check-from-abc-fact-check>
- Think about what you are grateful for, make a list and add to it daily. It can be very simple (i.e. happy pet, pretty garden, sunshine etc). Display your list in a prominent place.
- Think about what you can control to be proactive (i.e. hand washing, social distancing). Remind yourself that you have done everything you can do to protect yourself and tell yourself "What I have is enough".
- Laugh and share laughter through jokes, movies, YouTube and funny books.
- Take a mindful walk in the garden, park or bushland (whichever works best for you) and be present to notice sounds, the birds, autumn leaves crunching under your feet, wind in the trees, or just the luxury of absolute silence. Notice smells of trees, flowers and damp soil. Observe shapes and textures of leaves on the trees. Notice the feeling of the air on your skin. Finally, wrap your arms around a tree and give it a big hug!
- Practise some breath work breathe in through your nose for 4 counts, hold for 4 counts, and breathe out slowly through your mouth for 4 counts. Do 10 cycles three times a day or whenever you are feeling anxious. Simply focussing on your breath will calm your sympathetic nervous system.

- Practise a grounding exercise if you are feeling overwhelmed.
Close your eyes if you wish.
Sit in a chair and notice your body against the back of the chair, your arms at the side of your body and push your feet to the ground. Then notice the sounds in your body and the room, a clock ticking, breath movements, people talking in another room. Then notice the sounds outside birds singing, people talking, and passing traffic. When you are ready, turn your attention back to the room and observe 4 things in the room (i.e. clock, paintings, photos) but do not dwell on them, just notice. Then observe your body and how it feels in the chair now and return to the present moment.
- Listen to your favourite music and move to the rhythm of it.
- Yoga, Tai Chi and Meditation all help to relieve stress and anxiety (many of these are online now, and some classes are even on free to air TV channels).
- Some suggestions for meditation practise are the Sounds True website. You can access a free series of daily Mindfulness meditations with Tara Brach and John Kornfield here: <https://www.soundstrue.com/store/mindfulness-daily-3.html>
- Install Apps on your phone such as Calm, Smiling Mind and Insight Timer for guided meditation of many different types and lengths.
- If you are self-isolating and unable to hug others, wrap your arms around yourself and hug as tightly as you can. Feel the love and connection flowing through your body.
- Stay connected with others as much as possible through the telephone, Facetime, Facebook, Messenger, Skype, emails, letter writing etc. Ask family members or friends to help with this process if you are unfamiliar with any of them (you will also feel a sense of achievement with learning a new skill!).
- Make a loose daily schedule that can give your day some structure. Creating a daily rhythm can be reassuring, purposeful and soothing.

- Share what you have found useful with others (i.e. shopping outlets, food deliveries, pharmacy deliveries etc).
- Explore and learn a new activity (e.g. cooking new healthy recipes, juicing, baking, sewing). Consider a creative project and explore new Podcasts (especially those offering perspectives of wisdom).

Please remember we are here to talk with you, whatever you may be feeling, and especially if you are feeling overwhelmed and finding it difficult to cope. Please check out our online or telephone counselling service.

How can Ayurveda help our immunity?

Ayurveda becomes more and more relevant in our life as we stop and contemplate the effects that the COVID-19 is having on us as individuals and the world.

We realise the importance of immunity, and balance, which is the underlying basic concept of Ayurveda and the relationship we have with our world. Ayurveda is about following your inner nature, in balance with the outer world through the Five Great Elements, so that you can blossom holistically, and it sets clear guidelines for diets, habits and lifestyle.

As an Ayurvedic Practitioner with a Yoga and Art background, I believe in a holistic, nurturing approach to healing by nourishing every aspect of the whole self, including diet, lifestyle, nutrition, yoga, meditation, visualisation and creativity to suit individual needs. I believe that Ayurveda allows people to be personally responsible for their health and wellbeing, opening the door to wellness, creativity and balanced lifestyle by using a full range of healing modalities in one complete, integrated system. This involves an individual health assessment and advice, education and guidance on nutrition and lifestyle. In this way Ayurveda can be life changing and transformative and has a lasting effect on body, mind and spirit, allowing each individual to live to their full potential. I love to run workshops in Ayurvedic cooking and all the different aspects of Ayurveda, embracing food as medicine, specific kitchen medicines for ailments, medicinal properties of herbs and spices, marma point massage, detoxing Ayurveda style and Ayurvedic concept of beauty.

I have recently returned from a trip to Kerala in South India, often referred to as the 'Home of Ayurveda', where I was resident at two Ayurveda Hospitals to experience and study first-hand, more about Ayurveda. At the Pranaadha Ayurveda Hospital I learnt different Panchakarma techniques, including massage styles and the use of oils, prescribing of medicines, and special Panchakarma foods. We had many enriching experiences at the local Temples, and learnt to prepare the local Kerala-style food. People in Kerala are so open-hearted, joyous and happy and wanting to share, so we made friends with so many locals and felt enriched by just being there.

The Ashtangam Ayurveda Hospital and College was higher up in the hills of Kerala and quite remote with little local chai-stop villages, rice-fields, and Jungle where a lot of the Ayurveda plants flourish. It was so amazing to see a Hospital in beautiful surroundings with smiling healthy doctors, good food, tailor-made treatments, yoga and lifestyle, a herb and medicine-making area, re-cycle policies and solar power and a wealth of knowledge and devotion to Ayurveda. We attended specially provided lectures and workshops, including techniques of Panchakarma, medicine plant growing, preparation, and production, from raw materials to enormous vats bubbling with concoctions of plants and herbs over wood fires, to the final bottled preparation. What a rich and humbling experience, everyone was so generous and embodying true Ayurveda qualities.

I feel this has enlivened my Ayurveda practice and knowledge and given me a deeper understanding of Ayurveda that I can share with others, and has also encouraged my appetite to learn more about Ayurveda.

In Ayurveda the eco-system is based on the Five Great Elements, the primordial constituents of the world: Space (or ether), Air, Fire, Water and Earth and these elements are in us, and in the world around us. The five elements make up the natural world, our body and our mind, the three constitutional doshas, Vata, Pitta and Kapha and determine the taste and energetic properties of herbs and foods in Ayurveda.

Space or Ether as it is also called, is the principle of all-pervading Space. It is the space in which all life takes place, the space in our minds, our lungs, intestines, in between cells and in cells, and within atoms. We can look at our own personal space, the space in our mind, and we can create sacred space which cultivates prana (life-force) through practices of Yoga and Ayurveda to bring immunity, health and vitality into our life.

Here is the Vaidya (Ayurvedic doctor) preparing a ritual puja for us as students.

Air is the principle of motion, and is contained within Space, it is the potential for movement and change. Air enables us to experience touch, often an expression of love and well-being. Every signal in the Universe, sound, touch, light, warmth, taste and smell is carried by the Air element. Air is wind, light, mobile, clear, rough, dry and erratic.

Fire is the principle of illumination. Air creates the element of fire as it causes combustion from friction created by movement through Space. Fire burns brightly, it is the sun and our own digestive fire, which transforms solid matter to liquids and then gas, and transforms cold to hot, raw to cooked, ice to water, and evaporation.

Water is created when Fire liquefies certain substances, as a by-product when they cool and condense. Water is like the glue of life in that it holds everything together, a cake would just be dry ingredients without liquid to bind it together, cement and sand form nothing without it. Water's fluid cohesiveness brings everything it touches to a fluid whole. It is responsible for the quality of friendship and love. Water is essential for life, it lubricates our mucous membranes, fills our cells and creates a continuous sequence throughout our body. There is water, rain, rivers, the sea and the Earth's surface is predominantly water, and plants and humans consist of around 60 percent water. It relates to the sense of taste and allows us to experience the flavour of the world.

Earth is the principle of stability. Earth gives structure to matter, so there are defined objects and boundaries, form and shape, muscles and bones are high in the Earth element, giving strength and structure. It is the sense of smell. We grow our food in the Earth, with Water to nourish, Fire to promote growth in the form of sunlight, the movement of the Air in day and night and seasons, in Space. We often need to be grounded in our erratic, competitive, busy lives, through Yoga, gardening and walking on the earth in nature.

Walking through the rice paddies near the hospital.

Ayurveda utilizes the Five Elements in every area of life to create Immunity, balance, health and vitality. The daily routine shows us how to live our life in harmony with the Five Elements. If digestive fire is functioning well, then we are able to digest and assimilate the nutrients in our food, we don't accumulate toxins and we are able to build immunity. Digestion also includes digesting emotions. Eating warm, cooked, moist, fresh food in season and preferably grown organically and locally. Immunity/Ojas is also built through acts of love and kindness, volunteer work, appreciation and devotion.

Suggested Basic Daily Routine

- Wake early (before 7am), wash your face, clean your teeth and scrape your tongue.
- Drink warm water in the morning before breakfast to clean and prepare digestive tract (1 tsp grated fresh ginger in boiling water with a squeeze of lemon and a little honey).
- Or ¼ tspn turmeric, 1 tspn ginger juice, 1 teaspoon aloe vera juice, 1 tspn honey in warm water. Regarded as a liver tonic, this cleanses system and re-hydrates)
- Do some gentle exercise and a period of meditation. This can be yoga or tai chi etc.
- Do self-massage with warm oil
- Take a warm shower and avoid getting really hot water on your head, as it overheats the brain.
- Enjoy your breakfast with gratitude.
- Stop regularly during the day to smile and breathe into your belly.
- Enjoy a relaxing lunch. This should be the main meal of the day, food digests more readily at this time of day.
- After work, get changed into different clothes and do something to change your pace – go for a walk, a swim, put on some music or do a few stretches.
- Enjoy cooking and eating a light evening meal. With mindfulness
- After evening meal slow down and relax. Avoid stimulating activity such as office work, time on the computer or excess TV (especially violence or distressing visuals).
- Before bed, meditate, gentle breathing or simply massage your feet and try to let go of any tension you feel in your body from the activities of the day.

Recipe for lunch, dinner or detox, kitchari

Ingredients

1 tsp ghee

1 tsp turmeric

1/8 tsp asafoetida/hing (Asafoetida or hing is a powdered resin used instead of garlic or onion and has digestive properties). It is available from Indian grocers or Ayurvedic suppliers such as Darlin' Dahl)

6 curry leaves

1 tsp ground cumin

1/4 tsp ajwain seeds (These are like a wild celery seed (Bishop's weed) and are used for low digestive fire, indigestion, flatulence and the nervous system) Readily available from Indian grocers or Ayurvedic suppliers.

1/2 – 1 tsp Himalayan rock salt

1/2 cup basmati rice and 1/2 cup split moong dahl

Method

Rinse rice and dahl 3–4 times until water runs clear. Add 4–5 cups of boiled water. Add ghee, spices and salt, bring to boil, turn to low for 15 mins. Add more hot water if dry. Simmer on low until dahl is a smooth, porridge mixture. Can add a squeeze of lemon and a small pinch of salt. Cooked, lightly spiced vegetables or 'subji' is excellent on the side.

In the future Meredith will be at the Cancer Care Centre doing a one day workshop including lunch.

Date and time: to be confirmed due to COVID-19.

Advance Care Planning – Why is it important to me?

Helene Hipp, counsellor.

National Advance Care Planning Week took place in late March this year and took on a greater importance for many than in the past. Suddenly with the advent of Covid- 19 everyone was faced with the very real possibility that they, their family or friends could catch this disease and become extremely ill or die.

Thankfully, the horror statistics of cases and deaths from around the world were not replicated in Australia – but for many the initial fear has galvanised them into thinking about advance care planning.

So, what is advance care planning and why should you be talking and thinking about it? Advance care planning is about making your future health care preferences, directions and values known and deciding who you would like to make your health decisions if you are no longer able to make them for yourself. It is not something that you should be starting to think about when you are gravely ill or hospitalised. Anybody at any age can lose their capacity to make their own health decisions– young adults can be involved in serious car accidents and be left in a coma, anyone at any age can have a stroke and many older people lose their capacity over time due to advancing dementia – so everyone needs to have the conversation sooner rather than later. When my son turned 18 my husband, son and I had the discussion about our advance care wishes and each filled out our directives forms. It was a great way to start the conversation and find out what each of us felt was important. And we found out some surprising things about each other – highlighting that we should not assume we know what others would prefer, even those closest to us.

Advance Care Planning Australia (2020) highlights some interesting facts on their website:

- Almost 50% of people will be too unwell to make their own end of life medical decisions
- Less than 15% of Australians have documented their preferences in an Advance Care Directive
- 1/3 of Australians will die before age 75
- Most people die after a chronic illness, not by sudden death.
- There is also a lot of research that having an advance care directive makes things easier on family members when they are required to make those difficult health decisions for their loved ones. As a bereavement counsellor it is clear that family who made the decisions for their loved ones with the support of a written directive were much better able to navigate their grief, feeling that they had honoured their family member's wishes. Making the decisions without this documentation often causes family discord about who knew 'best' what the family member would have wanted, and also significant guilt about making the difficult decision, for instance, to have a respirator turned off.

A couple of points to understand about Advance Care Directives:

- This form is not a will – you still need to draw up a legal will, which outlines your wishes after your death
- You will still need to appoint an Enduring Power of Attorney to make future decisions about your finances and legal matters
- You are able to change your Advance Care Directives at any time by filling out your current wishes on a new form and distributing to all relevant parties
- It is a legal form and must be witnessed appropriately – guidance is given regarding this on the website
- Certified copies must be made and given to your substitute decision maker/s, other family, your health care provider, your local hospital – so your wishes are clearly documented and known by all
- If you regain your capacity to make your own decisions, you are able to do so – the directive is only used while you are unable to make your own decisions.

Each state and territory have their own forms. To find out about the South Australian Advance Care Directives form and information, go to the Advance Care Directives site at <https://advancecaredirectives.sa.gov.au/> which provides, the form, information about filling it in, examples and key questions to get the conversation started. The Advance Care Planning Australia site also has some valuable guidance, examples, links to forms for other states and territories and discussion to help you with your decisions. This is found at <https://www.advancecareplanning.org.au/> So please take some time now to start investigating and talking about this very important issue with your family, knowing that having the documentation will ease stress and anxiety for your loved ones if they ever need to use them.

Book review

Phosphorescence; On awe, wonder & things that sustain you when the world goes dark by Julia Baird. Published by Forth Estate 2020.

Julia Baird is an award-winning Australian journalist and author, most familiar to me through her excellent facilitations of The Drum panel discussions on the ABC. Her biography of Queen Victoria was one of The New York Times top 10 books of 2016.

What I didn't know about her was that she has experienced 3 major surgeries for advanced and recurring appendiceal cancer and been close to death each time. This book, Phosphorescence, is a series of essays and reflections spurred by her experiences of the cancer and the life she has lived so far. The coincidence of its publication during this time of living through a pandemic makes it particularly relevant as we strive to hold on to hope.

It is a beautiful book, both aesthetically, the cover design by Hazel Lam and Yellana James captures an undersea calm, and in Julia Baird's writing. She describes phosphorescence as the light that shines from within us, where people shine and survive through the hardest of times. She describes 3 simple, powerful lessons she has come to come to understand:

"First, pay attention.

Second, do not underestimate the soothing power of the ordinary.

Third, seek awe, and nature, daily.

Fourth....show kindness, practise grace, eschew vanity, be bold, embrace friends, family, faith and doubt, imperfection and mess; and live deliberately".

The essays in the book explore examples of these principles from her own and other people's lives. Written in a way that isn't superior or smug. It's not a self-help book or even a memoir but more her personal examination of how our relationships with humans and nature allow to us understand how life works and how we bond together helpfully to make sense of it all.

What I particularly liked about her approach was an equanimity in her language, no high-flown rhetoric, but paragraphs that stopped me in my reading flow to absorb and think of what that idea might mean in my life. She provides the research behind her ideas but not to overwhelm the vignettes that illustrate the ideas.

Phosphorescence is a gift of a book, intelligent and insightful. I'm more often a quick reader but this was one of those books that had me slowing down, savouring and appreciating Julia Baird's way with words. They helped me coalesce my thoughts more clearly and hold on to hope.

New Meditation Cds in the Library

Helleruth Naparstek has a large number of CDs dedicated towards Cancer to assist with the healing process and they are now available from the Library and the Cancer Care Centre.

About the Author

Belleruth Naparstek, LISW, BCD Psychotherapist, author and guided imagery pioneer is the creator of the popular Health Journeys guided imagery audio series.

Her first book, Staying Well with Guided Imagery (Warner) is a widely used primer on imagery and healing. Her second book, Your Sixth Sense (Harper Collins) has been translated into 9 languages and called one of the most thoughtful and sophisticated looks at imagery and intuition.

Her latest book on imagery and posttraumatic stress, Invisible Heroes: Survivors of Trauma and How They Heal (Bantam Dell), won the Spirituality & Health Top 50 Books Award and was released in paperback January of 2006. Highlighted in the 20th anniversary edition of their seminal book, Courage to Heal, Ellen Bass and Laura Davis call Invisible Heroes, the most useful book for trauma survivors to be published in the last decade. As Prevention Magazine noted, she has been quietly creating an underground revolution among mainstream health and mental health bureaucracies, by persuading major institutions such as the U.S. Veterans Administration, the U.S. Dept of Defense, Kaiser Permanente, Blue Shield of California, United Health Care, Oxford Health Plan, scores of pharmas and nearly 2000 hospitals and recovery centers to distribute her guided imagery recordings, in many instances free of charge to recipients. Recently she has been developing military-friendly resources with the help of the U.S. Army and the Ft. Sill Resiliency Center, and DCoE (Defense Centers of Excellence) has declared guided imagery one of their Twelve Promising Practices.

Her audio programs have been involved in over two dozen clinical trials, with nearly a dozen studies completed to date. Efficacy has been established for several psychological and medical challenges, most recently for military sexual trauma and combat stress at Duke University Medical Center/Durham Veterans Administration Hospital. Naparstek received both undergraduate and graduate degrees from the University of Chicago. She maintained her psychotherapy practice for over 30 years and for several years taught graduate students at The Mandel School of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve University. Earlier in her career, she supervised psychiatry residents at Cambridge Hospital/Harvard Medical School and was Chief of Consultation & Education at the Woodburn Center for Community Mental Health in Fairfax County, VA. She also did a brief stint as a musical comedy actress at Second City and The Tip Top Tap of the Allerton Hotel in Chicago, and says that her musical comedy skills sometimes come in handy for teaching.

For People with Cancer Meditation

A guided meditation to help you fight cancer. Imagery and affirmations to help the body mobilize a strong immune response.

Healthy Immune System Meditation

This imagery is designed for general immune system strengthening and balancing. It is written to support the strong but discriminating action from protector cells in the body; to encourage appropriate action from suppressor cells; and promote the defense system's ability to differentiate between compromised and healthy cells. Additional imagery encourages appreciation and gratitude for the body's exquisitely orchestrated, non-stop system of protection. With affirmations. Running time 35 min.

Fight Cancer Meditation

This immersive, hypnotic guided cancer meditation offers 41 relaxing, inspiring minutes of guided imagery and affirmations designed to help the body mobilize a strong immune response to fight cancer naturally, alongside the therapies provided by the more conventional treatments of chemotherapy, radiotherapy and surgery. Running time 41 min.

Caregiver Stress Meditation

Belleruth Naparstek wrote this imagery to remind the caregiver – whether this be a family member or a professional provider – of their own strength, goodness, tenacity and resourcefulness. The imagery affirms the generational values being carried forward. It notes the invisible forces of love and support surrounding the listener. And it underlines the need for self-care, self-consideration. It is of course also designed to provide relaxation and balance; sustain motivation; reduce isolation; acknowledge the difficulties without sugar-coating them; help release any accrued resentment; and restore hope for the future. With affirmations. Running time 45 min.

Fatigue from Chemo and Radiation Therapy Guided Meditation

This calming, hypnotic meditation for chemotherapy fatigue consists of guided imagery and affirmations that are designed to reduce the discomforts of chemotherapy and the side effects of radiation treatment. Regular listening to this meditation for fatigue helps to lessen nausea, anxiety, soreness, discouragement and tiredness, while calming and uplifting the listener in a natural, holistic way. Running time 40 min.

Radiation Therapy Meditation

This guided meditation for radiation therapy is designed to ease treatment side effects and symptoms, such as fatigue, burns, soreness and other discomforts, while at the same time reducing anxiety and encouraging a positive attitude toward healing. Running time 32 min.

Been diagnosed with cancer?

Start your journey with a free Pathways appointment.

Pathways is a free service offered by the Cancer Care Centre to people with cancer.

In a caring and supportive environment, one of our Support Workers will meet with you and listen to your story.

Telling your story is an opportunity to spend time with someone who cares, in a private, quiet environment to explore and prioritize goals, needs, and devise a healing plan appropriate to you and your personal cancer journey.

A Pathways appointment is also available to carers of someone with cancer. The Support Worker will explore how you can be of support to that person, while at the same time taking care of yourself.

The Support Worker will link you to services that will help assist you – either within the Cancer Care Centre or with other community organisations.

A Pathways appointment is of one-hour duration and is your first step in complementary care for your cancer journey.
